NEW SALISBURY COUNCIL CHAMBERS.

LOCAL GOVERNMENTS & TOWN PLANNING.

Local Government in South Australia had often failed to encourage high standards in the urban environment, the Premier, Mr. Dunstan, said today.

Mr. Dunstan was speaking at the opening of the Salisbury Corporation's new Municipal Office and Library complex.

He said that Councils in South Australia had always had sufficient powers to achieve the highest standards in street scaping and general urban and visual design.

"Many Councils failed to exercise these powers and as a result developed areas often became visual slums", he said.

The Premier congratulated the Salisbury Council on its new Municipal centre.

He said it established "a new standard of excellence in public architecture, site planning and landscaping".

"Other municipal and public planners could well learn from Salisbury's achievement", he said.

"Proper urban visual standards should be insisted on by the State's Local Government authorities".

"Uncontrolled outdoor advertising, sprawling used car lots, and drive-in service areas most often create visual blight for what should be attractive urban activity and residential areas".

He said the Government's election policy would deal at length with ways to achieve new urban environmental standards in South Australia.

"The role of municipal authorities will be essential to this programme".

"We will encourage Local Governments to become aware of their powers and prerogatives in establishing and pursuing proper visual standards for urban areas".
